ADMINISTRATOR'S REPORT

Discussion Concerning the Possibility of Creating a Separate County-Wide Tax District for E-911 Funding: County Administrator Jack Krakeel discussed the issue of creating a separate county-wide tax district for E-911 funding. This discussion was prompted by discussions he had held with the city managers of municipalities within Fayette County. The Emergency Communications Center is governed by a "911 Communications Board", established in 1995 when the various entities in the County who use emergency radio systems consolidated into one agency. Mr. Krakeel told the Board of the cities' concerns, provided extensive background information and explanation on this issue, spoke of the benefits and problems associated with the creation of this tax district, and answered questions from the Board. During the discussion, he told the Board that, in principle, the city managers for both Fayetteville and Peachtree City "have agreed with a proposal that I presented them with, and that was that we continue with the current level of contribution from each of the municipalities for the next four years, and utilize those contributions in addition to the County's contributions to retire the debt on the 911 Center." He summarized that what was essentially under consideration was an amendment to the County's current Intergovernmental Agreement between Fayette County and its municipalities concerning the consolidated Communications Center, which is due for renewal on October 1, 2010. It was noted that staff is recommending that the Board of Commissioners consider establishing the special Tax District to support E-911 Center funding.

The Board directed County Administrator Jack Krakeel to return to the cities with the proposition of creating a separate tax district, as well as their commitment to continue at the current funding level in the future, in order to reduce outstanding debt related to the 911 Center.

Mr. Krakeel concluded his report stating this issue would be formally placed on an agenda to be heard in September.

She reported that although RFPs had been issued, there was a wide cost disparity from the respondents, that five of the respondents did not even meet County standards, and that the Communications Board rejected all of the remaining proposals during its August 19, 2010 meeting. She informed the Board that the Communications Board has asked her to write a new RFP and will also provide her with additional guidance. She closed informing the Board that once the process was underway she would return to the Board of Commissioners seeking permission to issue the new RFP for a consultant.
